NATIONAL SEMINAR
आथर्वणी-2021

(A sneak peek into the roots of Indian Medicine and Philosophy)

April 17th - 21st, 2021

Venue: Heritage Village, Ahalia Campus, Palakkad

Greetings from Ahalia Ayurveda Medical College!

We are happy to inform you that the ATHARVA VEDA BHAISHAJYA YAGNA and National Ayurveda seminar "AATHARVANI, is being held in Ahalia Health Heritage & Knowledge Village, Palakkad, from 17th to 21st April 2021. Holding fast to the principle of keeping the causes for disease at bay, this Pancha divaseeya ATHARVA VEDA BHAISHAJYA YAGNA, a powerful five day yagna is performed at the Ahalia campus for the first time in Kerala.

National Ayurveda Seminar 'AATHARVANI' is planned along with the maha yagna as it is most appropriate occasion to throw light on the inseparable existence of Ayurveda & Atharva Veda. This can be viewed as a unique opportunity for all who are extremely curious in excavating the roots of Indian medicine.

The Ahalia campus is an epitome of a well-preserved ecosystem harbouring acres of medicinal herbs nestled in the beauty of greens. Ahalia Ayurveda Medical College is situated in a serene environment in the valley of Western Ghats, in the heart of Palakkad, spread over a vast green campus. It is managed by Ahalia International Foundation, a Unit of Ahalia Health, Heritage and Knowledge Village. This unique venture is organised to facilitate the purification of the environment and enlighten our minds with supreme knowledge (Brahmam).

The Atharva Veda speaks of a number of medicinal plants and their uses. Some of the rituals prescribed in the Atharva Veda have been performed for centuries, and show us that at certain junctures, medicines and herbs were offered for the propitiation of Gods. Atharva Veda has a series of Mantras related to curing various physical and mental ailments. When the power of medicines and nature against pestilences and diseases weaken, illnesses enter human life and the balance of nature is lost. The ATHARVA VEDA BHAISHAJYA YAGNA will undoubtedly be a window for the younger generation to perceive the ancient rituals in their real splendor. Earlier studies show the creation of bio-amplifiers in the atmosphere after the yagna with positive impacts on plants' growth in and around the yagashala. It will serve as a platform for generating data for many studies and research that can elicit such yagna's effects.

Ayurveda is regarded as the Upaveda of Atharva Veda. Ayurveda considers Prajnaparadha as one of the significant causative factors of diseases. Karma Kanda of Veda deals with the performance of rituals like yagna etc whereas Jnana Kanda with the transcendental knowledge (param vidya). Thus, it is appropriate to perform yagna to rejuvenate nature and living beings. The primary treatment modalities in Ayurveda such as Daivavyapasraya Chikitsa (like a mantra, homa, yagna, bali, etc., to appease the supernatural beings), Yuktivyapasraya Chikitsa (internal medications), and Satvavajaya (psychotherapy) has their roots in Atharva veda. The yagna is a part of Daivavyapasraya Chikitsa, majorly used in Bhootavidya, one among the eight branches of Ayurveda. Vedas are the most essential and authentic sources of information about such practices. The main aim of 'AATHARVANI' is to shed some light on the topics like Daivavyapasraya chikitsa, Prajnaparadha & Bhootavidya through the perspective of eminent scholars in the field.

We cordially invite all the enthusiasts to participate in the seminar and be a part of this auspicious ceremony.
